

Consort. A story that comes from the sea.

There was once a man who sailed around the world single-handedly. The year was 1965. His name was Sir Francis Chichester. In this historic feat, he was accompanied by his Consort jacket. Twenty years later, this garment became a status symbol for the outdoor life, following a restyle by designer Olmes Carretti. In the Eighties the Consort jacket was favoured by the youths of the Milanese 'Paninaro' subculture, and soon became widespread throughout Europe. And so it was that the Henri Lloyd Consort jacket, created for sailing, made its debut into the fashion world. Today The Consort has become a more far-reaching project and is ready to write a new chapter in its legendary story.

The Consort: centre of attraction.

The Consort is now also a line of polo shirts designed by Olmes Carretti, a project inspired by the famous Consort Jacket that has gone down in history. This exclusive garment boasts the most expert tailoring and attention to detail, for top comfort and practicality.

The fabric, specially designed by Olmes Carretti, creates a waffle-weave pattern that enhances each colour with uncommon depth, and the gentle washing treatment gives it a delightful worn feel. The Consort Polo Shirt, a new stage in the Henri Lloyd journey.

The Consort Jacket: all the details of a garment.

The Consort Jacket remains true to its nautical origins, with the addition of a new touch of fashion. The jacket is made of Brit Nylon, a fabric specially developed to reproduce the sheen and distinctive sound of the original model. The new production process ensures a very comfortable fit, making the jacket more modern, and in tune with a contemporary lifestyle. The Consort Jacket features inner quilting, zipper with a custom Henri Lloyd puller, storm-proof flap, adjustable cuffs, rainproof front pockets and inner smartphone pocket. Available in both men's and women's versions, The Consort Jacket is 100% waterproof.
